

Egg Fights Between Lehi and American Fork Youth

Condensed from the Oral History of

Edna Loveridge

Through the years there has been rivalries between Lehi and American Fork. This has been transferred to rivalries between the High Schools. A former Lehi resident is now Mayor of American Fork- J. H. Hadfield. In talking with he and his wife, one really senses the rivalry between the two communities; while subtle, it is definitely there.

There has been a rivalry between the two communities as long as community records exist of the competition between the two communities. Edna Loveridge's father told her about select battles between the communities after the turn of the century.

Edna writes:

"My Dad told me that when he was young the young people from Lehi and American Fork would meet at the forks of the road for an egg fight. When the first side ran out of eggs, the fight stopped until they divided the remaining eggs up, and then started over, until all the eggs were gone."

Maybe we should have the leaders of the two communities meet at the forks of the road and have an old fashion egg fight. That is egg-sactly what this rivalry needs.
